

what does it take to form a more perfect union?

This year marks the 225th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

To honor this milestone, the National Archives, with major support from AT&T, presents "Amending America." This new exhibit highlights the remarkably American story of how our country has amended, or attempted to amend, the Constitution to create a more just society.

And to engage all of America in this important discussion the National Archives Foundation is working with AT&T to bring the National Archives' "National Conversations on Rights and Justice" to cities around the country and online. This series will explore the tension between individual rights and collective responsibilities, a process that began with the Bill of Rights.

National Conversations on Rights and Justice

Women's Rights and Gender Equality

New York | October 21

Immigration Rights and Reform

Los Angeles | November 19

Educational Access and Equity

Dallas | February 2017

Building a More Perfect Union

Washington, DC | April 2017

Amending America is free and open to the public, and will be on display in the Lawrence F. O'Brien Gallery of the National Archives Museum in Washington, DC, through September 4, 2017. More at amendingamerica.org